

GRAVEST INTERNATIONAL CRISIS SINCE SPANISH WAR LOOMS AHEAD—UNLESS HUERTA ACCEDES TO MAYO'S DEMAND BEFORE 6 O'CLOCK TO-NIGHT WILSON WILL ASK CONGRESS MONDAY FOR AUTHORITY TO USE THE ARMY AND NAVY

FINAL WORD IS SENT AFTER DICTATOR REITERATES JEMAND FOR "SIMULTANEOUS SALUTE"

Huerta May Actually Fire Before Time Set, Which Would Be 7:36 p.m., Washington Time or He May "Yield" by Advising Wilson of His Intention to Salute—Either Action Would Be Known Before Hour of the President's Going to Congress—Wilson Outlines Plan of Action to His Closest Advisors—Leaders in Congress Declare President Would Immediately Be Clothed with All Authority Necessary.

BULLETIN.
Washington, April 19.—Sunday.—"Encouraging but not final," was the way Secretary Bryan shortly after one o'clock this morning summed a message just received from Mexico City. Further than this the secretary did not disclose what his latest despatch contained.

Washington, Apr. 18.—The gravest international crisis since the Spanish war looms ahead.

Unless Huerta before six o'clock Sunday evening accedes to Rear-Admiral Mayo's demand for a 21-gun salute to the American flag at Tampico President Wilson will go personally before a joint session of congress Monday and ask for authority to use the army and navy for such steps as may be necessary. Huerta may actually fire the salute before six o'clock, which would be 7:36 p.m., Washington time, or he may "yield" by advising President Wilson of his intention to do so. Either action taken at the last minute in Mexico could be known here before the hour of the president's going to congress.

This final word went to Mexico City today after Huerta had parleyed for the last time and reiterated his demand for a "simultaneous salute."

Outlines Plan of Action.
And leaders in congress declared President Wilson would immediately be clothed with all the authority necessary to take action. Seizure of Vera Cruz and Tampico, of the Mexican warships in those waters and of a section of the railroad from Vera Cruz to Mexico City as far as a tree the 20 miles west of Vera Cruz, and a Pacific blockade are features of a plan of action President Wilson has outlined to his closest advisors.

Such a course, authorities on international law describe as one of the short of war and yet not an act of war. Huerta, however, might construe it as one.

The climax came with dramatic intensity today when a third message came from Huerta insisting on his own conditions for a simultaneous salute. A conference between the president and cabinet members resulted in a prompt decision to brook no more temporizing or dilatory tactics. The following statement then was issued from the white house:

"General Huerta is still insisting upon doing something less than has been demanded and something less than would constitute an acknowledgment that his representatives were entirely in the wrong in the indignities they have put upon the government of the United States. The president has determined that if General Huerta has not yielded by six o'clock on Sunday afternoon he will take the matter to congress on Monday."

Expect Answer Early Monday.
Allowing five hours, the average time for transmission of cable messages from Charge O'Shaughnessy and including time for ciphering and deciphering, an answer was not expected here before early Monday morning, assuming that Huerta takes the full time for indicating his intentions.

President Wilson made his arrangements to leave late tonight for White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., to bring Mrs. Wilson, who has been ill back to Washington. He will arrive at the health resort tomorrow morning and leave tomorrow night, reaching the capital early Monday.

Huerta's continued evasiveness and his desperate condition both from a financial and military point of view, especially on account of the recent rebel victories, led many high officials to believe he would defy the United States and take chances on consequences through which a national spirit might be aroused to unite the warring factions and overthrow him in office. The Mexican constitutionalists' representatives here were in communication with Secretary Bryan today inquiring the trend of events. Well informed sources said the constitutionalists under no circumstances would unite with Huerta but would maintain a status quo in the territory they controlled, if the United States took no offensive action against them.

Foreign Governments Are Informed.
Ambassadors and ministers, too, were eager to learn the purposes of the American government and were supplied with information at the state department. A summary of the developments of the day was cabled to all American embassies and legations for the information of foreign governments. In the meantime the Atlantic and Pacific fleets continue steaming southward to Mexican ports. No orders were issued to the army.

The determination to force a definite reply from Huerta ending the tolerance of the United States with his dilatory tactics was emphasized strongly in the day's developments. It was a day of action in official circles, reminiscent to many of the scenes in 1898, for at no time since has a president threatened to ask congress to use the army and navy to enforce foreign policy. The knowledge that the Mexican situation had reached a turning point spread throughout the national capital generally. For two hours, while the clock ticked, a long message from Charge O'Shaughnessy, a half hundred correspondents waited in the corridors of the state department for an inkling of its contents. Then Secretary Bryan sent for Secretary Tumulty. President Wilson had gone to golf, expecting no developments until noon. Mr. Bryan and Mr. Tumulty conferred briefly and then hurried to a waiting automobile and soon were speeding toward the Virginia Hills, where the president was playing.

In the meantime the white house had telephoned to the golf club, a secret service man ran out to the ninth hole and communicated a message. The president abandoned the links and got into his big motor car. On the way to Washington he met Secretary Bryan and Mr. Tumulty. The party sped back to the white house.

When the president reached the white house, Postmaster General Burleson was waiting. Acting Chairman Shively of the senate foreign relations committee arrived a few minutes later. They studied the Huerta message only a few minutes and were unanimously agreed on a reply, which was drafted and dispatched to Charge O'Shaughnessy. It was couched in strong language and its tenor was indicated by the public statement issued from the white house saying that unless Huerta "had yielded by six o'clock Sunday afternoon" the president would lay the situation before congress.

Interrupts Official Business.
Official business was interrupted at the white house, callers being turned away with the statement that "grave business" was being considered.

In the meantime the aides at the navy department went into secret conference completing plans for the movement of war ships and marines. Rear-Admiral Victor Blue, acting secretary of the navy, forwarded to Rear-Admiral Badger on the flagship Arkansas, at the head of the fleet speeding to Mexico, the text of President Wilson's statement, giving Huerta until six o'clock Sunday. It also was forwarded to Rear-Admiral Fletcher at Vera Cruz who will communicate it to Rear-Admiral Mayo at Tampico. Rear-Admiral Howard, commanding the squadron in Pacific Mexican waters, also was notified.

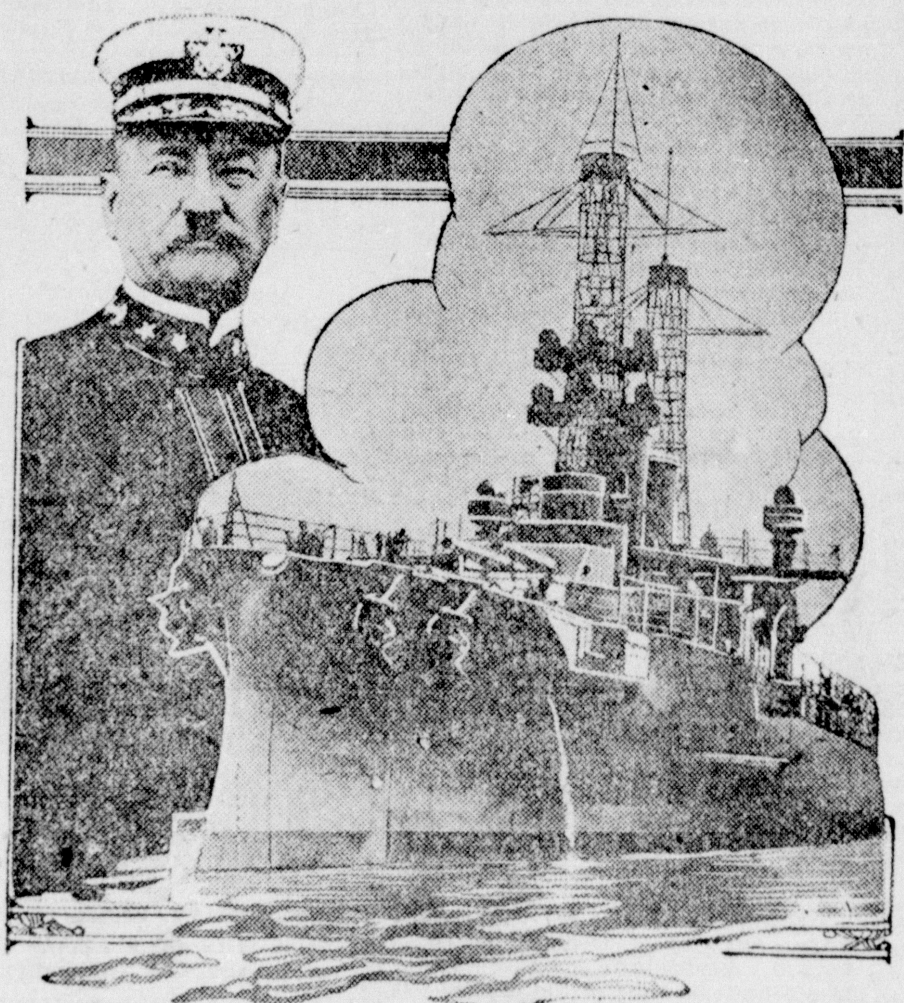

The fourth marine regiment on the Pacific coast was ordered southward. The armored cruiser South Dakota with 260 marines was dispatched from Bremerton, Washington, to Mare Island, where the remaining 630 marines will be divided with the Collier Jupiter. Then the two craft will steam to San Diego to await further orders.

The two powerful new dreadnaughts, Texas and New York at New York, although not under orders are ready to start for Mexico upon twelve hours' notice. The Virginia, Georgia, Nebraska, and Rhode Island, now at Boston, would be ready by the end of the month.

The Transport Hancock already has arrived at Tampico with 800 marines and the Cruisers Des Moines and San Francisco, the Gunboat Dolphin, the Scout Cruiser Chester, the Transport Buffalo and the Collier Cyclops already are there.

Fleet to Arrive Tuesday.
At Vera Cruz, Rear-Admiral Fletcher has the battleships Florida and Utah and the Transport Prairie with a large complement of marines. The battleships under Rear-Admiral Badger were reported off Key West, Florida and are

Rear-Admiral Badger and Flagship Arkansas

On board the U. S. S. Arkansas at Sea, by Wireless, Via Jupiter, Fla., April 18.—The battleships under command of Rear-Admiral Badger are proceeding steadily on their way to Mexican waters. Efficiency has been proven by the smoothness and speed with which mobilization has been accomplished. Admiral Badger is confident that the fleet is prepared for any emergency but is unwilling to disclose his tentative plans.

Rear-Admiral Frank F. Fletcher, in command of the warships at Vera Cruz, has been instructed to meet the Arkansas and the other battleships composing the squadron off Tampico, on Wednesday, April 22nd, when it is expected the entire fleet will be assembled. That will mean not less than 20,000 men.

If the salute demanded by the United States government is fired by the Mexicans, a gunboat will probably receive it and then return to the big warships which will lie seven miles out.

to arrive on Tuesday. On orders from Washington they could reach Tampico by Monday. It was generally agreed, however, that the force now at Tampico and Vera Cruz is sufficient to carry out any plan of action President Wilson may direct. Should aggressive steps be necessary before the president had had an opportunity to get congressional action, there is no question in the president's mind of the right of the executive branch of the government to act. Republican and Democratic leaders say any action taken in an emergency would be promptly backed up by congress.

Various steps not considered under the international law as constituting a declaration of war have been discussed. Any of these of course, may be construed by Huerta as a cause for war and change the status of affairs, but precedent shows many a case in which a Pacific blockade was declared, shutting off one nation from commercial intercourse with another or the seizure of a customs house and the collection of duties without involving either nation in war.

The Pacific blockade has not been looked upon by President Wilson as a very effective measure because precedent has not determined definitely whether a nation has the right to cut off the offending party from all commerce. It is admitted the United States could shut off Mexico from all commerce with the United States but whether foreign vessels also could be prevented from engaging in commerce with Mexico without a declaration of war is a disputed point.

It is apparent the president has in mind other forms of "reprisal" a term in international law defined as "a means of putting stress on a wrong doing state," by something short of war.

Landing of marines and even the bombardment of a town have been held as measures "short of war." In 1895 the British fleet sent a force ashore at Corinto, Nicaragua, seized a customs house and held it for fifteen days until an indemnity was agreed upon for indignities to a British vice-consul.

All officials were agreed that if Huerta did not yield, Tampico and Vera Cruz probably would be occupied and held until reparation was made in the form of a salute as demanded by Rear-Admiral Mayo on April 9th. While predictions as to what will happen were numerous there were some officials high in the councils of the administration who believed Huerta would not yield but would force the United States to land marines or occupy coast towns. With the act of American aggression completed, these officials believe Huerta will attempt to appeal to the patriotism of all factions in Mexico to repel the invader. Some observers fore-see in

HOLD-UP PASSENGER AND KIDNAP TRAINMEN

CONDUCTOR AND ENGINEER ARE MADE PRISONERS BY ARMED MOB

Officials of Savannah and Northwestern railroad announced here tonight that one of their passenger trains was held up by an armed mob at Hill-tonia, Ga., tonight and the conductor and engineer kidnapped. Conductors of the road recently declared a strike and it was intimated that alleged kidnapping was an outgrowth of the trouble.

According to the statement of R. R. Morgan, general manager, the men who held up train were disguised in work clothes and the conductor and engineer had been taken to a swamp nearby and that a posse had left Savannah in pursuit. Details of the affair are meager, owing to the remoteness of the zone.

Secretary Daniels eulogized the spirit of democracy.

SECRETARY DANIELS EULOGIZES THE SPIRIT OF DEMOCRACY

Secretary of the Navy Addresses Democrats at Annual Jefferson Dinner in Cleveland.

Cleveland, O., April 18.—The influence of Thomas Jefferson, upon the character and construction of present day legislation and government, was depicted by Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, before an eminent body of Cleveland democrats, assembled here tonight for the annual Jefferson dinner. The speaker eulogized the spirit of democracy, and declared that the same unselfishness, devotion and liberality which characterized its administration in the days of Jefferson were seen today vividly reflecting in the leadership of Pres. Wilson, the counsel of William Jennings Bryan and the example of Tom Johnson, Cleveland's late mayor.

Referring to the present administration, its tariff, currency and tax laws, Mr. Daniels said they were in thorough accord with the "principles of our great mentors, Jefferson and Jackson." Those statutes already enacted and the proposed antitrust laws, he added, showed that the "democratic party in the past year has done more in the way of constructive legislation than the republican party has in the past two decades."

Mr. Daniels paid a glowing tribute to the memory of Mr. Johnson. "Human liberty was threatened from a different direction when Tom Johnson was raised up to champion the veil of the masses. He incarnated the spirit of Jefferson. Jefferson was not more forgetful of himself in his thought of his countrymen than Johnson, and in the latter's use of his wealth for the community."

Discussing the effect of the new tariff law, the speaker said that contrary to the predictions of "the apostles of privilege, we are not flooded with 'pauper' goods from abroad. Our imports have been increased. Our exports have grown greater. Responding to the opportunities of a broader and fertile field, our produce has encountered this dreaded opponent, not behind the ramparts of ad valorem and specific duties to a combined amount of one hundred and fifty percent or more, but on the high seas of competition, its own ground. The dreaded conflict has been survived, and we have emerged not in defeat, but in triumph."

"What is true of the tariff applies with equal force to the currency. The bill which the last congress enacted embodies the best thought of the nation on the subject. It rears no overshadowing central structure to regulate the fate of whole communities."

"In the accomplishment of these democratic and truly American pieces of legislation, I would not withhold the credit deserved by those members of the congress who differ with us politically, yet who, in the liberality of their views, have rendered us their hearty support. It is seldom that two such vital issues are determined with so little party spirit. And I regard it as most auspicious that the time has arrived when men of high station disregard the element of party, and in honestly and patriotism lend their support to measures for which their opponents are responsible."

"There are trust bills now pending. There is urgent need for a better system of rural credits. But with the senate for the first time in its existence directly responsible to the people and such a record of speedy achievement to its credit, I doubt that any one will now question the parity of Jefferson under the inspiration of Mr. Wilson, will respond promptly to the trust of deciding these issues and such others as may arise, to the best interests of the people and in accordance with their will."

Laborer is Knocked Senseless by Plank Blown From Pile of Lumber—Gale Fans Dixon Fire, Causing Heavy Damage.

Chicago, April 18.—W. E. Vossler was killed today by a flag pole that was broken off by the wind and thrown across his automobile while he was riding with his daughter Alice, four years old. When the gust of wind, somewhat stronger than the gale that prevailed during the day, snapped off the sixty foot pole, Vossler put on full speed to escape the timber.

The heavy pole struck Vossler across the head and killed him. The staff bounded off the speeding car which dashed on unguided. The little girl screamed and clutched her father's coat. After running half a block the automobile struck a lamp post and stopped, wrecked. The child was thrown out and severely injured.

ATTORNEY MAKES FINAL PLEA FOR THE WHEATON TANGO SLAYER

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 18.—Contending that admission of an alleged confession which contained details of other crimes constituted grounds for reversible error, attorney H. W. Standridge contended that the confession was prejudicial and that it contained matters not in issue in the case. His plea is insanity.

State's Attorney C. W. Hadley of DuPage county and his assistant S. I. Ritchie, represented the prosecution. Arguments on the appeal continued until late in the afternoon. A decision is expected at the June term of court.

HEMPSTED, N. Y., April 18.—Flying upside down in a southwest gale, blowing more than 35 miles an hour, Charles F. Niles in a monoplane thrilled spectators on the aviation field at Hempsted Plains today.

After ducking the wind until he reached an altitude of about 2,000 feet, Niles with his aeroplane twisting in the blast succeeded in completing a circle. In a second attempt when the circle was about half completed the machine slipped back and earthward for nearly 1,000 feet when an unusually heavy gust struck it.

Niles ended his day's thrills by flying upside down for nearly half a mile.

Meets Monday.
Former Attorney General Bonaparte spoke before the canal committee against the repeal of the Panama tolls exemption.

House.

Met at noon.
James A. Gallivan, Democrat from the Twelfth Massachusetts district was sworn.
Debate was resumed on the naval appropriation bill with Representative Witherspoon of Mississippi leading the speeches against increases.

Judiciary committee continued work on the omnibus trust bill. Lands committee resumed consideration of the bill for a leasing system.

Representative Fitzgerald of New York acted as speaker in the absence of Mr. Clark.
Adjourned at 4 p. m., until noon Monday.

Washington, April 18.—Indications were manifest today that the treaty between Colombia and the United States for adjustment of the issues growing out of the separation of Panama from Colombia would encounter opposition when submitted to the senate for ratification.

Publication today of what purported to be the text of the treaty created much criticism of the convention.

Secretary Bryan would not discuss the published text and will withhold the official text until the original copies arrive from Bogota about May 1st. It then will be sent to the senate for ratification.

Senator Perkins of California today voiced vigorous criticism, expressing the belief the senate never would ratify it.
"I do not believe," said Mr. Perkins, "that the senate ever will agree to ratify this treaty which makes the United States apologize to Colombia provides for the payment of $25,000,000 and for free passage of Colombian war vessels through the Panama canal. Colombia should apologize to the United States and to pay Colombia $25,000,000 is just $25,000,000 too much."
Senator Simmons of North Carolina defends the treaty and maintained before the senate canal committee that its main provisions were substantially the same as contained in the treaty negotiated with Colombia by Senator Root when Secretary of State.

Hear Exemption Advocates

Advocates of the exemption of American coast-wise vessels from Panama canal tolls had their inning today before the senate canal committee when the first witnesses appeared in opposition to the repeal of the exemption clause.

Former Attorney General Charles Bonaparte of Baltimore, Russell L. Dunn of San Francisco, California and Representative Humphries of Washington, attacked the repeal on various grounds.

James Brown Scott, secretary of the Carnegie endowment for international peace was questioned by Senators Bristow and O'Gorman as to the motives of the organization in participating in the propaganda for the repeal of the exemption clause.

Mr. Bonaparte asserted no nation would have been so foolish as to building the canal with the understanding that it was to derive no special privileges from the canal. He said the position that the United States was bound by the same conditions in the use of the canal as the other nations of the world was "unreasonable and absurd under all the circumstances."

JACKSONVILLE WON TRI-CITY MEET

WAS VICTOR OVER BEARDS. TOWN AND SPRINGFIELD.

Local High School Annexed Athletic Contest by Close Score of 48 to 44 From Capital City Lads.—Beardstown Made 34 Points.—Summary of Events.

The Tri-City meet between Springfield, Beardstown and Jacksonville high schools, held on Illinois campus Saturday afternoon resulted in a victory for Jacksonville. The results follow:

Points
Jacksonville 48
Springfield 44
Beardstown 34
The contest was a hard fought one, especially between Jacksonville and Springfield and at the close only four points separated the schools. Jacksonville won seven firsts and three seconds; Springfield won four firsts and six seconds; Beardstown, three firsts and five seconds. On account of the threatening weather the attendance was cut down somewhat but there was a good crowd of rooters present. The day was the windiest of any similar event held on college hill. The dust blew exactly in the spectators' faces and the dry ground made ample material for the wind. Despite this fact the dashes and long distance runs were made in comparative good time.

At the beginning of the meet Springfield entered objections to two of Jacksonville's men but the matter was soon adjusted. The various events were pulled off in good shape but the meet was late in getting started because the Springfield men took a chance on making the 1:24 Wabash train and it was late.

Cannon was the highest individual point winner, making a total of 19. He was disqualified in the 120 high hurdles for knocking down five hurdles. He looked good to win first in the event. Boxell was having everything his own way in the 220 low hurdles and was five feet ahead of his opponent when he jumped the last hurdle and fell heavily to the ground, the fall taking his breath for a few minutes.

Springfield showed up well in the runs but were weak in the field events. Beardstown showed not only strength in some of the dashes but were good on the discuss and the running broad jump. Sutherland had no trouble in landing first place in both the hammer throw and the shot put. Carter ran the 880 yard in fine fashion and didn't have to push himself at the close. The Reynolds boys showed up well.

One of the prettiest and most exciting races of the afternoon was in the relay when Homer Reynolds, who got a bad start on Crum of Beardstown, who had won first in the fifty and second in the 100, made up his loss and out ran his opponent. The crowd gave him the glad hand. Jacksonville annexed the relay in fine fashion, the runs being made by W. Hemmings, Homer Reynolds, Gary Whitlock and Everett Reynolds. Cannon was in so many events that he only made two trials at the pole vault and crossed the bar at 10 feet, a height no vaulter could reach. The high school band furnished music during the afternoon.

OPINIONS OF PROMINENT CITIZENS.

(By The Civic League.)

While circulating the petition for the calling of the election on the general school law, the members of the Woman's Civic League secured the opinions of a number of the prominent citizens who were asked to sign it.

A number of these opinions with the names of those advancing them are given below:

"I am in favor of going under the general school law and have been for twenty years. I think Jacksonville should be abreast of the times. Our old charter was outgrown years ago. Moreover there is now no law by which there can be a legal election of board members held in this city. Under the commission form of city government ward lines are abolished. There are no wards, and can be no such things as ward elections."

—John A. Bellatti.

"That's a good move. The school management is in bad shape. I wonder why the women haven't taken hold of this before. They have had the ballot for years." (Not on issues.) "There are many of us of the opinion that the present mode of electing is illegal as the law now stands—that in fact we have no school board today."—Frank J. Heintz.

"Glad of a chance to sign it. Think of the school boards we used to have: Dr. Price, Dr. Milligan, Mr. Wolcott and others."—Chas. H. Ward.

"The present arrangement is bad. This would be a great improvement."—Dr. Joseph B. Barker.

"I consider the general law would be a great improvement. I will do all I can for it."—Andrew Russell.

"It will be the means of absolutely divorcing the schools from politics. Shall be glad to do what I can for it."—Henry J. Rodgers, Sr.

"We need this more than anything else. I am in favor of it."—Edgar E. Crabtree.

"Heartily favor it. Would help circulate petition if I had time for it."—John E. Hall.

"This ought to have been done years ago."—Henry Stryker.

"I heartily approve of this move."—L. A. Barnhardt.

WHY ARE YOU SO TIRED?

The Weather is Not to Blame for That "Dragged Out" Feeling.

"This weather simply takes the life right out of me, I can hardly drag one foot after the other," said a run-down, tired-out woman, the other day.

We want to say to every such person in this vicinity. Don't blame the weather, it's your condition. You need a strengthening tonic and the very best we know is Vinol which is a combination of the two most world-famous tonics, namely, the medicinal, curative elements of cod liver oil and tonic iron, for the blood.

A case has just come to our attention from Millford, Mich. "Mrs. Julia Barber says: 'I was run-down and hardly able to drag about; my appetite was poor and I was not able to work. My druggist asked me to try Vinol. The first bottle helped me and after taking the second bottle I was able to work and felt well and strong. Vinol is the best medicine I have ever taken.'"

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.—Lee P. Alcott, Druggist, Jacksonville, Illinois.

Established 1843
THE JACKSONVILLE JOURNAL
Published by
JACKSONVILLE JOURNAL CO.

"The New Monroe Doctrine" was recently presented before the Literary Union by Mr. Thomas Worthington and appears elsewhere in this issue. Under this title Mr. Worthington discusses the Mexican situation and points to faults he sees in the manner President Wilson had handled the problem. It is evidently not Mr. Worthington's intention to harshly criticize the president's course but rather he credits president with a sincere and earnest desire to restore the reign of law in Mexico and to avoid warfare if possible. On the other hand he points out that the president's course is not justified by precedent and seems to be the result of personal views with reference to popular government rather than the following of the recognized principles of international law, which have been adhered to by the nation through the years. Mr. Worthington's article reveals a serious and fair minded study of the big problem and will be read with special interest at this time when a crisis seems to be very near at hand in the Mexican affair.

The government now proposes to give the matter of getting the farmers and the consumers of produce into closer touch by establishing direct communication between them. This plan will be tried out in ten post offices, Rock Island among them. Farmers throughout Illinois are being asked to send their names to the Rock Island office stating what kind of produce they can sell to the consumer and in what quantities. Lists are then to be made and mailed to consumers. The experiment will be watched with interest and may have some beneficial results in a general way. Locally however the project is not of very special interest. The average Morgan county farmer has a good market here at home for all the produce that he wants to sell and gets just as much as he could hope to receive by going to the trouble of packing and shipping to some customer in some other city and then waiting for his money. The fact is too that most of our farmers are so busy with larger duties that they will hardly have time for such methods. In localities where market gardening is the thing, the plan may help but like most of the other schemes for the bettering of farm life and extending aid to the farmer, it does not fit in this locality where the farmers have the best of all that's going and are the leaders in wealth and business activity.

A great deal of street paving is projected for this season and the board of local improvements is to be congratulated that this work is being taken up and is to be pushed. Jacksonville needs some new pavements and some pavement repairing. Meanwhile however and before the paving work is done the Utility franchise matters should be settled or it should be definitely determined that the laying of pavements on streets occupied by the street railroad does not constitute an acknowledgment of the rights of the company to be there. Speaking of franchises brings to mind that these important documents have been hanging fire now for several years. The Utility Company is said to be desirous of getting the franchises. The people believe that they should operate under proper franchises and thus there seems to be no good reason why the matters at issue should not be settled soon and satisfactorily to all parties concerned.

The eyes of Illinois will be upon the supreme court this week for a decision is expected in the Scowen case appealed from the superior court in Chicago. The case involves the validity of the Woman's Suffrage act. Since the appeal has been pending nearly three hundred township elections have been held and sixteen counties and a hundred towns have been added to the dry column. There are many persons who hold the belief that the court will declare the law constitutional. They argue that the members of the supreme court have unofficial knowledge of the many complications which will result if they declare the law invalid and that the law is only about three hundred words in length. They say the judges long since made up their minds individually as to their opinion and that if they had intended to declare the measure unconstitutional that they would have done so months ago and thus avoided the many complications. The week however, is likely to show whether or not these surmises are correct.

There have been many primaries for nominations for members of the Board of Education in this city where not more than six or seven persons attended. Afterward no doubt the persons were elected and some of their acts were not satisfactory to the tax payers and the patrons of the schools. This fact leads one to remark that the speaker is right who said recently at the court house that neither charter nor general law will make good schools unless the people show their interest by electing the right kind of officials.

THE WHITE LIGHTS.

Cy Warman, famous as poet and story teller of railroad light died not long since at his home in London, Ontario. Warman was an Illinoisan, born in Cumberland county and after serving as a fireman and engineer on a railroad developed a literary worth in poetry which gave him wide fame. One of his poems recently published in the Davenport Democrat is especially appropriate now that he has passed on to "that other city."

Will the Lights Be All White?
Oft, when I feel my engine swerve,
As o'er strange rails we fare,
I strain my eyes around the curve
For what awaits us there.
When swift and free she carries me
Through yards unknown at night
I look along the line to see
That all the lamps are white.

The blue light marks the crippled car
The green light signals slow;
The red lights is a danger light,
The white light, "let her go."
Again the open fields we roam,
And, when the night is fair,
I look up in the starry dome
And wonder what's up there.

For who can speak for those who dwell
Behind the curving sky?
No man has ever lived to tell
Just what it means to die.
Swift toward life's terminal I trend,
The run seems short tonight;
God only knows what's at the end—
I hope the lamps are white.

A CITY STREET.

The following lines taken from a little magazine devoted to paving interests are appropriate just now in view of the discussion of various pavement projects. The lines point to the cause of bad pavements in many cities.

They took a few old brick, and they took a little tar,
With various ingredients imported from afar.
They hammered it and rolled it, and then they went away—
They said they had a pavement that would last for many a day.
But they came with picks and smote it to lay a water main,
And then they called the workmen to put it back again.
To run a railway cable they took it up some more,
And then they put it back again just where it was before.
They took it up for conduits to run the telephone,
And they put it back again as hard as any stone.
They took it up for wires to feed the electric light,
And then they put it back again, which was no more than right.
Oh, the pavement's full of furrows, there are patches everywhere;
You'd like to ride upon it, but it's seldom that you dare.
It's a very handsome pavement, a credit to the town,
But they're always diggin' of it up, or puttin' of it down.

The prospects for the re-election of Ben W. Hooper of Tennessee have been materially brightened by the decision of the Independent Democrats of that state to support him again this year. Through their aid Mr. Hooper, who is a Republican, has been twice elected to the governorship. The support of the Independent Democrats is due chiefly to Governor Hooper's stand for the enforcement of the prohibition laws.

Untimely Guests

By WALT MASON.

It's hard to wear a saintly smile when bores exclaim together, "We've just dropped in to talk a while about the crops and weather." The earnest man gets down to brads, sells goods or scribbles sonnets, to earn the dollars of our dads, and keep his wife in bonnets; he has no time to fool away, he needs each precious second; if man would win at balling hay, each moment must be reckoned. And so the toiler, anxious-eyed, must labor at his fences, if he would keep his wife supplied with coin for bridge expenses. And when his troubles are so thick that he could fairly blubber, the bores come in, Hank, Tom and Dick, and sit and talk and rubber. There ought to be a law, methinks, for those who thrash the weather, compelling all such idle ginks to go and herd together. It isn't fair that busy folks must evermore be bothered, by dizzo jays with dizzo jokes and gags they've lately fathered. Protect the man who to his work with righteous fervor passes, and boil the idler and the shirk in sulphur and molasses.

ORGANIZING IN THE COUNTRY.

"We are organizing in the country." Following out this dictum of Ambassador Walter H. Page, uttered at Richmond a year ago, the Conference for Education in the south, which will meet at Louisville, Ky., April 7-10, will make a systematic attempt to organize the social, economic, and educational forces in the rural districts of the United States.

Those in charge of the Louisville meeting believe that the way to organize is to organize. Instead of merely talking about it, the various groups of farmers, business men, country women, preachers, doctors, editors, and school workers, will constitute themselves an organization for immediate work, just as if they were organizing permanently. They will adopt constitution and by-laws, and go through the regular order of business of co-operative associations, so that those present will be able to start similar organizations in their home communities.

The leaders will bring blank forms used in their work to show all the important details of managing co-operative enterprises. Experienced workers will conduct clubs for boys and girls. There will be demonstrations of the country home, showing the farm house, its equipment, its activities and industries; and school and church demonstrations to show what co-operative effort can do in these fields toward producing an efficiently organized rural community. To mark the complete harmony between the work of the school and the work of the community the Southern Educational Association, with a membership composed of representative teachers and school officials, will hold a joint meeting with the Conference.

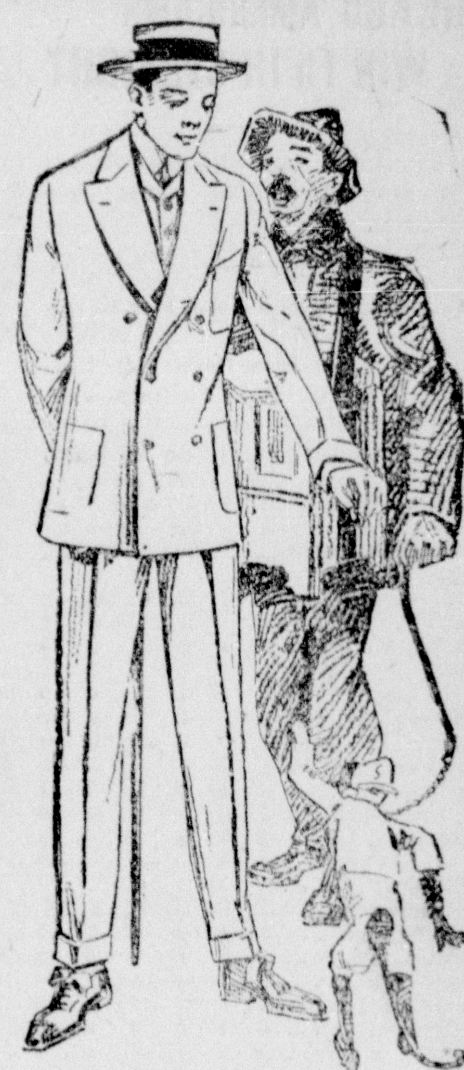

"The Conference for Education in the South is unique among educational meetings," declares Dr. P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education. "Its discussions are not confined to educational theory, school organization, and school-room practice, but include rather the broader problems of education in their relation to industrial and commercial life. Every question on the program is considered with reference to its practical application to life and conditions in the Southern States. This gives the Conference a peculiar value, not only for those interested in the general problems of education and life in the South, but also for those with similar interest elsewhere."

Mr. and Mrs. D. Rees Browning have returned from a three weeks Southern trip. They were in New Orleans much of the time but also visited Biloxi and some other resorts not far from New Orleans. The weather was ideal during their stay in the South and they feel much benefited by the rest and recreation.

We Keep Your Suit New!

The man who does not have his clothes dry cleaned and pressed frequently,—does not get the full wear out of them.

Long before the clothes are worn out the lapels droop over, the coat front breaks, the sleeves wrinkle and pull out at the elbow, the trousers become baggy and lose their shape at the bottom, and the entire suit looks old and disreputable.

Our service keeps them clean and fresh, keeps them shaped right and fitting perfectly until they wear out. It's not only an aid to good dressing—but a real economy, as well.

Take advantage of it frequently.

The New Monroe Doctrine

(By Thomas Worthington.)

Paper read before the Literary Union.

The "Monroe Doctrine," as originally declared in 1823, was that any attempt on the part of European nations to extend their systems of government to this hemisphere would be dangerous to our peace and safety, and would be considered as a manifestation of an unfriendly disposition towards the United States; and at the same time President Monroe said: "With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere."

In this there is no suggestion that the government of the United States proposed to interfere in the domestic affairs of any nation on this side of the Atlantic.

When President Wilson announced the policy of his government toward Mexico, it marked the culmination of the changes which have gradually occurred in the relations of this country to the nations south of us. No longer are we merely to repel European invasion of their borders, but we are to foist upon them our ideas of government, to establish a species of suzerainty, a "benevolent despotism," over them.

Within about a month after Huerta became provisional president, his government was recognized by Great Britain, followed by nearly all other European and some South American powers.

President Wilson declined to follow the same course; issued a statement that, "We can have no sympathy with those who seize the powers of government to advance their own personal interest and ambition," and later declared that "Nowhere can any government long endure which is sustained by blood or supported by any thing but the consent of the governed."

He apparently overlooked the fact that every government set up in Mexico from time immemorial has been "stained with blood;" that revolution, assassination and the shooting of prisoners of war are there looked upon as legitimate measures, and that government "by the consent of the governed" is and always has been a myth as applied to Mexico.

Then, about the middle of the summer, he sent his personal representative, John Lind, to Mexico, with instructions to secure a settlement of the difficulties in Mexico on substantially the following terms:

(1) The immediate cessation of fighting and a definite armistice solemnly entered into and scrupulously observed;

(2) Security given for an early and free election in which all agree to take part;

(3) Huerta to bind himself not to be a candidate for election as president;

(4) All parties to abide by the result of the election.

This was followed by various declarations, apparently emanating from the president, that "Huerta must go," and the position of our government, as finally announced, was that it would never recognize a government in Mexico of which Huerta should be the head, or a congress elected while he was president.

Some of these propositions are absurd others indefensible under the Monroe doctrine or the usages of international law.

Think of the bandit Zapata in the south and Villa and the other roving bandits in the north, all of whom "live off the country," voluntarily ceasing to fight, entering a "sole armistice," and "scrupulously observing" it! Then who but a dreamer would imagine that such men as these, even leaving Huerta out of consideration, could or would give security for a free election in which all would take part; or would abide by the result of the election if its results did not suit them?

While dealing with this branch of the subject, it may be well to call attention to the fact that Mexico is not even a "Latin nation," but it is an "Indian nation." Of its 15,000,000 people, about 3,000,000 are of Spanish blood; 6,000,000 pure Indian, and 6,000,000 mixed, and of these about 8,000,000 can neither read nor write. The country has not the civilization and traditions of Europe back of it; but the civilization and traditions of Indians, most of whom are ignorant, treacherous and blood-thirsty.

But the proposition to eliminate Huerta and a congress elected under his presidency is the most important part of this program. It is the most serious and indefensible feature of President Wilson's policy of interfering in the domestic affairs of a nation with which we are at peace.

It says to the Mexican people that the government of the United States proposes to interfere in your elections, to say what congress you shall not elect and what man you shall not select as your president, and you must have a government founded on the "will of the governed" as those words are understood in the United States. It is only one step more to dictate whom the Mexican people shall elect to their congress or their presidency.

I do not question the right of President Wilson to delay recognition of the Huerta government until it showed itself capable of performing the ordinary functions of government. The principles controlling the subject of recognition have been reasonably well defined in international law for many years.

Theodore D. Woolsey, professor of international law at Yale university, in his "Introduction to the Study of International Law," defined the subject as follows: "When a state has suffered by revolution or by disruption, then things are beyond the inquiry of international law, whose only inquiry is, whether a certain community or organization is in matter of fact, a separate, independent existence, performing the functions of a state and able to take upon itself state responsibilities. The question of a state's right to exist is an internal one, to be decided by those within its borders who belong to its organization."

To bring the question before the external powers not only destroys sovereignty, but must either produce perpetual war, or bring on the despotism of some one strong nation or strong confederacy of nations, requiring all others to conform their constitutions to the will of these tyrants.

"Moreover, it is a question outside of the law of nations, which presupposes the fact that nations exist and have rights."

"The fact of the existence of a state is in general an open one, easy to be judged of, and involves no decision of the advantages of one form of government over another."

With these principles the practice of nations on the whole, and in the long run, agrees.

"All in the end acknowledge the government de facto."

Prime Minister Asquith said that his government recognized Huerta as president ad interim "because we should in the case of any Central or South American state, whatsoever was at the time the de facto government, and according to international law then in our possession, there appeared to be no element except Huerta and his supporters which offered any prospect for the restoration of stability and order."

"The secretary of state of the United States used substantially the same language with reference to the recognition of the Diaz government in 1877 referred to in an article by Prof. Woolsey in the 'Independent' of December 11, 1913, (as quoted from Moore's Digest of the International Law of the United States), 'recognition was delayed for ten months by our government, and he was then recognized, although he was publicly charged with 164 crimes, many of them murders.'"

Professor Woolsey has put the subject so much more clearly than I could that I will quote from his article somewhat at length. He says: "That the rule governing recognition was applicable to the other Latin-American states as well as Mexico, the correspondence of our state department shows, and this is the law and the policy generally. A de facto change of government which seems to have popular backing and to be strong enough to make good the obligations entered into with other states is recognized by those states after a decent and sufficient interval. Provided these fundamental requirements are satisfied, irregularities in the succession of a new administration or blemishes in the character of a new executive head are matters of internal sovereignty with which other states do not concern themselves." * * * * *

"President Wilson declared that he never would recognize him; furthermore, that the new congress was incapable of legal action and must not be convened. So far as the American public has been informed, this is the sum and substance of Wilson's policy—never to recognize Huerta nor his congress—and for the reason that Huerta is so bad a man."

"It will be noticed that this policy is essentially different from the prevailing policy and usage of the United States in similar cases. Hitherto it has asked not whether a de facto executive irregularly in office was a good man, but whether he was a strong man backed by the popular will, so far as that found expression, and capable of fulfilling the obligations of his state. And in order to determine this, time must elapse."

"We must credit Mr. Wilson with the best of intentions. He surely seeks the restoration of order and the reign of law in disturbed Mexico. In delaying the recognition of Huerta he is acting wisely, is following sound precedent. It would have been well, perhaps, to have sounded other states and acted in unison with them, thus testing the stability of Huerta, as our late ambassador in Mexico seems to have advised. But delay of recognition to test the strength and popular backing of a de facto executive is one thing; the delay attendant to a refusal ever and under any circumstances, to recognize Huerta or any of his legislative doings, is quite another. It substitutes the ethical principles of our president or his secretary of state for precedent, usage and common sense."

He then refers to three alternatives to the settlement of the Mexican situation: 1st, the removal of the embargo on the exportation of arms; 2nd, a "pacific blockade," and, third, a military expedition to protect American and foreign citizens and their property and to restore order.

As to the first alternative, he says: "To restore order in Mexico by supplying both factions with arms and watching them fight it out, would jeopardize all property, imperil the lives of foreigners as well as natives, foster brigandage and anarchy, indefinitely postpone a settlement. And is Carranza in any way superior to Huerta? Has he not bloody hands also?"

In summing up the situation, he uses the following rather emphatic language: "Every one of these alternatives to the recognition of Huerta is inadmissible. Our policy should be to strengthen somebody in Mexico, not weaken everybody; to build up, not to pull down. In refusing ever to recognize Huerta, the administration has violated our usage and the dictates of common sense. Is it honest enough and strong enough to correct its blunder? There is an obstinacy of strength; there is also an obstinacy of weakness."

His prediction as to the effect of supplying arms and ammunition freely seems already to have come true. Many innocent people have been slaughtered or driven into exile by the forces of Villa and Carranza, and their rifles may soon be turned upon American citizens."

While the course of President Wilson is not founded upon any precedent, yet in some respects it seems to find at least partial justification in the history of this country in its relations to its southern "brothers." The Mexican was a war of aggression and conquest. The same is true of the Spanish-American war, although in this case it was benevolent aggression, and not for the purpose of securing territory. The protectorate which the United States has assumed over Santo Domingo and some of the Central American states certainly finds no justification in the Monroe doctrine. It is a little disconcerting to find Mr. Bryan, the arch enemy of imperialism, negotiating a treaty with Nicaragua extending the suzerainty of the United States over that country in such an emphatic manner that the senate would not approve it.

We have been so well assured of our good intentions in all these matters that we have not stopped to consider how they impress others. It is sometimes well to see ourselves as others see us, and hence I shall quote quite freely from an article in the March "Atlantic" by F. Garcil Calderon, a Peruvian diplomat, now editing a Spanish-American review.

After speaking of the general opposition to the Monroe doctrine which prevails in South America, he says: "The Monroe doctrine is passing from the defensive to intervention, from intervention to the offensive. From a theory which opposes all attempts of Europe to make political changes among the democracies of the new world—a theory which forbids all acquisition of territory, which opposes all transfer of authority from a weak to a strong power—is evolved the doctrine of President Polk, who in 1845 decrees the annexation of Texas on account of the fear of foreign intervention."

The number of aspirants for the senatorial toga of Joseph L. Bristow of Kansas has been increased to seven by the announcement of the candidacy of Frank Doster, a judge of the State Supreme Court.

William A. Prendergast, who placed Theodore Roosevelt in nomination for the presidency at the Progressive National Convention, has accepted an invitation to address the Republican State Convention of Indiana.

Congressman Joseph R. Knowlton has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States Senator from California.

Willard C. Fisher, formerly a professor at Wesleyan University is mentioned for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Connecticut.

United States Senator Wesley L. Jones of Washington, whose term will expire next March, will probably receive the Republican nomination without opposition.

The "anti-machine" Republicans of Minnesota have selected William E. Lee of Long Prairie to oppose Governor Elbert for the Republican gubernatorial nomination this year.

Among those prominently mentioned for the Republican nomination for United States senator from Indiana, in succession to Senator Shively, are Frank A. Ball, a wealthy manufacturer of Nuncie; Addison C. Harris, former Ambassador to Austria; Hugh Thomas Miller, former lieutenant governor; W. L. Taylor, former attorney general, and Edward D. Crumpacker, former representative in congress.

Yet he declares that, "In principle the Monroe doctrine is an essential article in the public code of the new world," and that, "It is only the brutal expression of the doctrine, the cynical imperialism which is deduced from it, which becomes dangerous to the moral unity of the continent."

This author draws a sharp line of distinction between the conduct of the United States toward Panama and governments to the north or it and toward these to the south. "Toward South America," he says, "its intervention deserves only respect."

From Panama to the La Plata it is working for the union of the peoples and for civilization."

M. Calderon hopes that the time may soon come when, "In place of a single poleman state, a number of governments should form a kind of ideal confederation whose beneficent influence should be felt by all of the republics."

This is substantially the same idea expressed by Prof. George H. Blakeslee, after his trip through South America (in an article in the North American Review for December, 1913). He calls it the New Monroe Doctrine, or the "Pan American Monroe Doctrine," which should embrace at least the United States and the well organized governments of South America. Upon such a basis the doctrine would have the support of the public opinion and the armies and navies of the rapidly growing nations of South America; and it is believed that it would do away with much of the suspicion and dislike with which the doctrine is now regarded in South America, and in fact, south of the Rio Grande.

I have endeavored to outline briefly the two new aspects in which the Monroe doctrine may be regarded—first, the practical aspect as illustrated chiefly by the conduct of President Wilson toward Mexico, and secondly, its theoretical aspect as outlined by many friends of a Pan American alliance. The latter might do much in my opinion not only to maintain friendly relations with the nations of South America, but to reach a peaceful solution of the difficulties with which Mexico is now struggling.

No one in this country seems to question the good intentions of President Wilson in his dealings with Mexico. But good intentions and disinterested motives do not constitute statesmanship. Neither the president nor any one connected with his administration has a right in his dealings with a foreign nation to follow his personal ideas upon the subject of government, or even his personal ideas of right and wrong, if such ideas are in conflict with the principles of international law. In other words, in his official capacity, he is as much bound by the principles international law in foreign affairs, as he is by the constitution and laws of this country in domestic affairs.

I have referred to the feeling of opposition to the Monroe doctrine which exists in South America. The same is true among European nations. They say that our government refuses to permit them to take effective measures for the protection of the lives and property of their subjects on this continent south of the Rio Grande, and yet does not itself offer such protection. In the latter instance it has refused to recognize the Huerta government, has taken various peaceful measures to overthrow it; and on the other hand has permitted its subjects to furnish arms and ammunition to General Villa, with which, perhaps, William H. Benton was killed and numerous Spanish subjects despoiled of their property and driven out of the country. If this condition of affairs continues it seems certain to lead to trouble with European powers. It seems also likely to lead to armed intervention of this government in Mexico—a result which every patriotic and right minded American would deplore.

Should this result occur, it will be, in my judgment, chiefly because the president has attempted to impose his personal views of popular government upon a sister nation rather than follow the well recognized principles of international law.

J. MARSHALL MILLER DISCUSSES SCHOOL QUESTION

Editor Journal: I have read several articles in your paper reading the proposed change from our present system of conducting our city public schools to that of the general school law.

First—Any radical change in the manner of conducting our public schools, or the appointment of a superintendent or teachers therein, means more or less of a jar in conditions and a probable set-back.

Second—It is said the special charter is an antiquated instrument and out of date. That portion of the present general law under which it is now proposed to elect a board of education composed of nine members and a president was enacted a la walmot verbatim by our state legislature twenty-five years ago; and as far back as forty-two years ago the general law of this state provided for the election, in cities of this size, of nine members of the board of education, one-third of whom, after the first election should be elected annually. The language of the law in that particular forty-two years ago being only slightly different from the present general law.

Why condemn a law because it is old? If the provisions of the special charter law for the election of four members of the school board was enacted too long ago and is out of date, why seek to elect nine members as provided under the general law more than forty-two years ago? Would not such a change come under the same criticism of being antiquated? The state of Illinois has made wonderful progress and still goes comfortably forward under a constitution nearly forty-four years old.

Third—Only a few years ago the anxious advocates of a change in school affairs to that of the general law earnestly urged the adoption of the commission form of municipal government in order among other things, that the city's business could be better managed by five men than by thirteen. Now they urge the election of ten men to manage school affairs instead of five as at present. How is this for a paradox?

The mayor and commissioners are now elected for a term of four years, to give business stability to city affairs, and next we are asked to take up the general school law which requires an election by the whole city every year for a president and one-third of the members of the board of education. Some people seem to think that the cure-all for all civic ills is simply to have the people vote upon anything and everything, the oftener the better. The county and city are piling up tremendous expense to the taxpayers every year on primary elections and voting upon this issue and that issue. Does any one dare say our city public schools will be administered better under ten men than under five? Is it not common experience that better business results are accomplished in the management of public as well as private corporations by a board or directorate small in numbers? Efficiency does not consist in the large numbers of managers or employees.

Fourth—We are told that under the general law, if adopted, we will have freedom from the ward system and ward control. Granting, for the sake of argument, this is the condition in the schools below the eighth grade, for it can not be in the high school or eighth grade, my reply is this: There is no occasion for such conditions, neither has it always been so. It is not the fault of the special charter law, but of the personnel of the board.

When Mr. Charles G. Rutledge was a member of the board of education he was instrumental in organizing the school board so that every teacher and even the school janitors of the various wards had to be voted upon and appointed by a majority of the school board. This method of election more largely than the general law realizes. The ward system can easily be eliminated by a resolution or by-law adopted by the board. Though a member is elected from a ward he serves the entire city, just as a legislator or congressman serves his state or country and not his constituency alone.

But we are told that different wards are in some cases given different equipment and certain advantages. Does any one presume to say that different schools and localities may not need special means and special treatment for peculiar local conditions? And this is not unfair to other schools, nor an inequality or a wrong or mistake in itself.

Fifth—It is strenuously asserted that the general law will eliminate "party politics and political corruption" from our public schools. That the mayor of the city cannot make our school system a political machine asset. Suppose we elect ten men from the city at large, nominating them by petition as provided. Stir up the whole city vote every year, along with other political agitation in electing a president and three members of the board of education. What will be the result? Not less politics in our schools, but more. A political machine annex or adjunct? No, a political machine in itself.

And more, whenever you get the schools under the general law, then you are under the management of three school trustees of the school township. These three trustees appoint their treasurer of school funds for the township. Do you know what hot political bank fights have been made by banks in the past in order that some certain bank man control the township school trustees? That is because the trustees appoint the treasurer who will make the deposit of the school funds with the bank in control. If you do not know of this practice, investigate.

Now add to the importance of that position by placing all the city school funds into the hands of this treasurer and you will think that politics have got into the school system such as you never dreamed was possible. Jacksonville is a school district and may have only one member of said board of trustees, and two other country school districts of the township will get one member each. The law being that not more than one trustee may be elected from any one school district. Would the voters of Jacksonville dominate the situation under such conditions?

What would the program be next spring in Jacksonville if we adopt the general law? On the second Saturday of April will be an election for township trustee of schools. On the third Saturday in April an election of the board of education, and on the third Tuesday in April the election of a mayor and city commissioners. Three elections in less than three weeks. Add to this primary elections and petitions of candidates and then ask yourself, are we getting our school out of politics or are we getting them in? Any more political agitation and expense to the taxpayers? Is the cure in more opportunities to vote?

Sixth—What will be the outcome of an election for nine members and one president of the board of education where it is fair to assume that there will be twenty-five or thirty candidates from the city at large for the offices? Does any one claim that ideal school men and women for the board and president will be elected in this way? Were you pleased with the result of the election of city commissioners a few years ago? Please consider who may be elected under this new regime. Is it probable that all parts of the city will be equally represented? Be careful you do not raise the old issue of the "east end" against the "west end." The late Hon. George W. Smith, who directly served on the board for perhaps more years than any one, always opposed the adoption of the general school law, and he well knew the best interest of our schools.

Under the general law the board of education may not locate or build a school house without a vote of the people as to location. Under the charter they may. When would a board of ten men, with the other difficulties added, have built for us the eighth grade building? "Better endure the wrongs we have than fly to others we know not of." One thing is certain, if the present charter is discarded, it is gone forever.

Uncertain and unsettled conditions of the charter law are claimed by the advocates of the general law, and in one newspaper article favoring a change we are told there will be six members and a president, and in another there will be "six or nine members to be determined." How and by whom?

We are told "the secretary of the board is chosen from the members of the board," and that the board receive no compensation. Then the secretary can not receive pay. The law does not so read.

Another item reads two members and a president will be elected each year, and so the confusion goes on, in articles written by those who charge the confusion of the old law. I venture writers and speakers are making assertions who have never carefully read the special charter law or its amendments, or the provisions of the general law. This is not a surprise, as laymen usually undertake to tell you what is the law, with a certainty never ventured by lawyers. The Bible refers to the blind leading the blind and the results that follow.

Again, it is asserted our schools are behind other schools of the state. And this after all the plaudits we have heard of our fine public schools! I deny the assertion and challenge any one to prove it. We are told our superintendent will have more power under the general law. The law does not so read, neither is the board given more power. The fact is, there is not an advantage given under the general law not found in the charter. Not even in the matter of lending school funds, for in Hurd's statute of this state, chapter 122, section 72 (1913), it is provided that "When school funds are held by the treasurer of a district created by any special act, such funds shall be invested according to the provisions of this act," that is to say, at "not less than 4 per cent nor more than 7 per cent," etc.

One provision of the general law not in the charter is that boards of education may establish and maintain a teacher's pension and retirement fund. Do the teachers of this city want an assessment made upon their salaries by the board in order to maintain aged and retired teachers?

I also wonder if the city teachers want another burden placed upon them as provided in the general law, namely, additional examinations, a general law, among other things, read thus: "The board of education shall have power, and it shall be their duty to examine teachers by examinations supplemental to any other examination." Surely the teachers are burdened enough with the frequent examinations by the county superintendent under the requirements of the law as it now is.

To those who claim not to be satisfied with the present conditions of our public schools, let me suggest that ample opportunity for improvement is given under the present charter. Do not throw the charter aside for a general law granting fewer opportunities for advancement and improvement, a few less direct, less responsive and less easy to place responsibility, under far more cumbersome, and loaded down with the number of officials. Upon a candid examination it will be found that there is not one necessary or desirable feature in the general school law that does not exhibit in our special charter.

Then why change merely for the sake of change? The change in itself can not be a benefit. Improvement and advancement in our public schools still must remain in the faithfulness and efficiency of those who compose our board of education and our teachers.

J. Marshall Miller,

E. F. GOLTRA SUED BY HIS SONS GOVERNNESS

Annette Tassone Asks $40,000 For Injuries Inflicted By Rifle.—Charges Parents Allowed Boy to Keep Weapon in His Room.

A suit for $40,000 damages has been filed in Circuit Court in St. Louis against Edward F. Goltra, 4416 Lindell boulevard, president of the Missouri Iron Company, and Missouri member of the Democratic National Committee. The plaintiff is Annette Tassone, Newstead avenue and West Pine boulevard, former governess in the Goltra home, who alleges she was shot by Goltra's 12-year old son, William Brown Goltra. The suit also names as defendants the child's mother and the child, making both parties to the action.

In the petition it is alleged the plaintiff was employed as a governess at a salary of $35 a month and lived in the Goltra home.

The facts in the papers filed are taken from the St. Louis Globe as follows: The petition recites that the child was indulged to such an extent by his parents that his every wish was granted, and that he was permitted without reprimand to assault some of the servants in the house and was reared by his parents to disregard the commands of his parents and also those of his governess.

Rifle for Birthday Present.

"On the child's 11th birthday, September 20, 1912, it is charged, the parents gave him a repeating rifle of 22 caliber and ammunition for it, which he was allowed to keep in his room, where he also kept a shotgun and a loaded revolver.

"The petition alleges that November 14, 1912, while his governess was reading to him, the boy leveled the rifle at her and shot her through the right breast, the bullet lodging in or near the left lung."

"The petition recites that the governess was confined to her bed for seven weeks and was permanently injured. It is alleged her heart was displaced, she has difficulty in breathing and her nervous system is wrecked.

"It is charged the child's parents were negligent in allowing him to have the firearms, and the allegation is made that the boy on numerous occasions threatened children of neighbors and inmates of his father's home with the rifle."

It is charged that the child's threats were reported to his parents, but they made no effort to take the firearms from him. The plaintiff is represented in the suit by the law firm of Leahy, Saunders & Barth.

"Goltra entered his appearance in the suit through his attorneys, Nagel & Kirby.

"When seen at 4395 West Pine boulevard, Miss Tassone said: "I was reading war stories to the boy and he was playing with his rifle. I tried to persuade him to put the rifle up, but he insisted it was not loaded. I became so nervous I could not read and held the book to my breast. The rifle was pointed directly at me. I attempted to arise from my chair when the rifle was fired, the bullet passing through the book. It entered my right breast, penetrated the jugular vein and lodged in my left lung."

"I was immediately sent to St. Anthony's Hospital, where I remained 7 weeks, after which I returned to my duties at the Goltra home. Last February my condition made it impossible for me to continue my duties."

"Before leaving I asked Mr. Goltra what provision he would make for me. He told me he had done all that he thought he should do."

"Miss Tassone says her vocal cords were seriously affected. Miss Tassone, after the suit is finished, will go to France, her native home. She is a pretty French type, with black hair and large dark brown eyes."

WOMAN'S COLLEGE NOTES.

Arbor day at Illinois Woman's college was fittingly observed by the planting of the college elm. The students marched in a body from the chapel to the place of planting. The president, Miss Clem, spoke briefly about Arbor day and also the hopes of the class in the beginning of this work. Following this a song written especially for the class of 1914 was sung by the seniors and sophomores. Following this each member of the class used the historic college spade in the exercise. President Harker then gave a most interesting talk on the significance of the planting of the elm and its relation to the history of Jacksonville and Illinois Woman's college.

President Harker will preach at Greenfield Sunday, April 19th, in the interest of the forward education movement.

The annual open meeting of the Phi Nu Literary society was held Saturday evening, April 18th. A very large audience was present to see the work of the organization. The program may be found in another part of the paper.

Miss Susan Reibhan of Collinsville, one of the alumnae of the college and Misses Reno and Maurer, also of Collinsville, were visitors at the college on Friday and Saturday.

Misses Edna Parsons and Clara Baker were in Barry Tuesday, April 14th, acting as judges in the declamatory contest held by that school. Miss Helen Allen was in Griggsville Friday evening acting as judge of the declamatory contest held in the high school. She returned Saturday morning.

The Theta Sigma society is working hard on the annual play they expect to give on Tuesday, April 21. This will be a rare treat and it is hoped that the young women will have a good audience.

this summer will do more good than a barrel of medicine. Get out into the open, close to nature and have the time of your life. Rest, relax and recreate. Ride over sun flooded trails in the hills; row on silvery lakes; fish in shady brooks; tramp down winding paths among the trees; loaf in soft valleys of green; stroll in the moonlight; eat of the fat of the land and sleep like a babe. SOME RECOLLECTIONS OF THE GREAT REBELLION

(By Capt. J. M. Swales.)

They rejoined Sherman at Savannah, Ga., in time to participate in the campaign through the Carolinas. Logan in command of the 15th corps and Blair in charge of the 17th, and were in the grand review at Washington City, May 24, 1865.

The battle of Atlanta did not end the campaign around the do-nothing city by any means, for there was more or less fighting up to the surrender, Sept. 2, 1864, and in these battles and skirmishes the Black Eagle was conspicuously in evidence, more especially at Ezra church, on July 28th, where Logan added new laurels to his wreath of undying fame. As to the difference between generals in staying qualities, note the following episode. Gen. Sherman ordered Gen. Schofield, in command of the 23d corps, to execute a certain important movement. At the same time he ordered Gen. John M. Palmer, in command of the 14th corps, to act in conjunction with Schofield under his (Schofield's) orders. Palmer bucked and refused to report, alleging for his reason in so refusing, that his commission as major general antedated that of Schofield. That was a fine state of affairs. The delay caused by the unhappy incident was equal to the loss of 2,000 men. It was put up to Sherman to decide this matter, his decision being in favor of Schofield. Right there and then Palmer offered his resignation as commander of the 14th corps and insisted that it be accepted without delay. It was accepted and Gen. Palmer quit right there and then and went back home to await orders. Gen. Jeff C. Davis, commander of the second division (to which my regiment belonged) was appointed in Palmer's place and commanded the 14th corps to the end of the war. I think at the close Gen. Palmer was provisional governor of Kentucky. . . .

From the time Sherman's army left the vicinity of Chattanooga, May 4, until the fall of Atlanta, September 2, there was a constant cracking of musketry or booming of cannon every hour, day or night. It was the most strenuous campaign in the history of the war and the marching, counter-marching and fighting covered more territory in extent than all other campaigns combined. From Mission Ridge and Lookout Mountain clear to Atlanta was one vast battle field and in many places yet to be seen evidences of the great strife which took place a half-century ago. Some of the old earthworks that have mocked the storms of 50 years are still to be seen and tourists to the southland are still picking up relics on fields where contending armies strove for the mastery. There are markers and monuments by the thousands on the fields made immortal by the valor of those who fought and fell in defense of the starry banner or the emblem of the lost cause. There are unnumbered thousands who sleep in graves marked unknown. Millions of dollars have been spent in monuments and markers to point to the hallowed spot where valor proudly sleeps. Millions of pilgrims have wandered their way to these silent cities of the dead to mourn at the shrine of patriotism and point to the ground hallowed by the dust of those who gave the last full measure of devotion to the cause of humanity and that generations yet to come might rest in security and peace beneath the wings of the red-crowned symbol of Columbia, the brightest gem in the galaxy of nations.

About two miles northeast of the state capital of Georgia there is located a large circular pavilion containing the cyclorama of the battle of Atlanta. In the center is a circular platform from which the visitor may view the 400 feet of canvas on which are portrayed the stirring scenes of July 22, 1864. It belongs to the city of Atlanta and a fee of 10 cents is charged to view the painting, and it is worth ten times ten cents to see what took place on that tragic day when the blue and grey met and fought and struggled as men never fought and struggled since the beginning of that great campaign. The building is on the exact spot and center of the battle field, and near the Howard house, where Sherman and McPherson conversed a short time before the latter's tragic death. There is the old Decatur railroad bed, and the twisted iron rails, old railroad ties, broken mulets, dismantled gun carriages, old cartridge boxes and belt buckles of brass with the letters U. S. A. and C. S. A. and other paraphernalia of war. There is also the old ambulance in which McPherson's body was carried from the gory field. A part of the breast works are to be seen over which the contending forces repeatedly charged and were as repeatedly repulsed in the red tempest. All the things mentioned here were real, and as the eye follows until the vision strikes the canvas it is difficult to tell the real from the artificial so lifelike is the work of the artists who placed the scenes on canvas.

I have seen the cyclorama three times and would like to see it again. It took three years to paint the masterpiece, 30,000 pounds of lead and oil being used for the purpose. A paid lecturer explains all the interesting points of view, and, being an ex-confederate soldier, he of course gives the Yankees the worst of the game. As most of his auditors are southerners he distorts history to please them and tries to make it appear that in that particular battle the union soldiers were as five to one of the men in grey. "Mr. Sherman had an army of one hundred and forty thousand well fed and well armed men, while Mr. Hood had less than forty thousand ragged, starved soldiers in that battle," and a lot more of rotten talk about the affair of which he was either ignorant or a monumental liar or perhaps a mixture of both. The truth is that the battle was fought and won by the 15th and 17th troops. The other corps, the 4th, 14th and 23rd being far to the right and out of supporting distance. Numerically there was little difference between the opposing forces in the contest of the 22nd of July. The most inspiring feature of the cyclorama is the heroic figure of Logan and his cool black charger dashing where there was the most danger. The "Black Eagle" with his long raven hair streaming back over his shoulders was an inspiring and picturesque sight, especially where he is leading a brigade of his old 15th corps to recapture DeGrass' battery which had fallen into the hands of the enemy earlier in the day.

He appears as the very incarnation of war and utterly fearless of danger in that whirlwind of death and ruin and came out of it all unscathed and unharmed. After we got through with our visit to the cyclorama we returned to the capital building to see the sights (this was something over a year ago.) There was considerable to see and all was of much interest. On the first floor there were glass cases in which were stored the shot torn banners of the lost cause. On the walls were paintings life size of Jeff Davis, A. H. Stevens, Lee, Gordon and other leaders of the confederate forces. Gordon was to people of Georgia what Logan was to the people of Illinois which of course, means that he was immensely popular and his memory is held sacred by all people of all classes. In the state house yard, is a magnificent equestrian statue in bronze of the great soldier as he appeared while leading his grey legions to battle. Near the capitol is a bronze figure of Henry Grady, mounted on granite, and altogether a very imposing memorial to the great editor of the Atlanta constitution, and a noble representative of the New South. These two illustrious Georgians typified the south as it was before the war and as it was after the reconstruction period and is today. The one thing that struck me most forcibly was the entire absence of the flag of our country—the old Union banner—the stars and stripes. In all Georgia I do not remember of having seen one, and that one waved over the national cemetery at Andersonville. The people of Georgia may be loyal to the government but they do not seem to be especially stuck on Old Glory, and the majority down there, young and old, despise the northern people as much as they did when Sherman marched down to the sea. This spirit of hatred has been handed down to the new generation by those who fought against the flag in the sixties and it will take several generations to obliterate the bitter feeling engendered by the great conflict. The daughters of the Confederacy are especially vindictive and filled with enduring, irradicable malice. This was demonstrated only a year or two ago when they erected a pile to commemorate the deeds of the foulest murderer that ever trod the soil of America or disgraced the region of tophet which he occupies today; and has from the time his black soul left his body when he was hung in the old Capitol prison at Washington November 10, 1865. This "heroic martyr and idol" of these daughters of men who fought four years under the banner of the slaveholders rebellion was the infamous keeper of the Andersonville prison and was the instrument of torture whereby 15,000 Union soldiers were done to death—the ignoring of which has no parallel in the annals of time. This hero and martyr was the rat-faced, weazle-eyed, ignorant foreigner, Captain Henri Wirz. The monument erected to the memory of this monster is an insult to the nation and more especially to the kindred of the thousands who perished in that charnel house—that miry hell and castle of despair and death.

FLIES MUST RECEIVE EARLY CONSIDERATION

Plans Should Be Laid Now to Exterminate Pest, Says Chairman of Public Health Department.

Mrs. E. R. Curry, chairman of the public health committee of Women's clubs, believes that the work of exterminating the fly should begin at once. She says: "If we wish to have 'head them off fly campaigns' instead of 'kill them off,' we should begin right now before the flies warm up and creep out of their winter quarters."

"Suppose you stir up the clubs in your city doing public health and civic work and make suggestions for the spring clean up and fly campaigns. Food will soon be exposed to street dirt and flies if the women do not prevent it."

"Get your club presidents and chairman of public health and civics, the mayor, city attorney, city physician, president of chamber of commerce, superintendent of public schools and editors of papers interested to help."

Children Can Help.
"If you need an ordinance to control the breeding places, your city attorney and mayor are already interested. You must have the support of the newspapers and the school children are the best helpers in carrying out the work. An early campaign, using the children is effective. Distribute cards reading (child's name) has killed . . . during the month of . . . signed by parent or guardian. These can be collected by the teacher once a week and other cards given out."

"The teachers can be provided with envelopes and each week cards can be sealed, marked with grade and building and then carried by a child to the member of the fly fighting committee who has charge of the school. There should be a small committee in each school district. Workman's time, books or paper ruled both ways will make good coils on which to keep the scores. Druggists will always give swatters to each pupil with advertising on the handles. The city or club has usually given a prize to the child in each school building who killed the most flies. This is an especially good plan for getting the first flies in the spring and so preventing the breeding. At first the children often kill only one or two flies a week, but you see how much it means to get the first ones and get them in every home where school children live."

"If you buy flies make the campaign short, so that children will not go into the business of raising flies. You might buy flies for two weeks with good results, paying 5 cents a gill, receiving them one hour a day and burning them immediately. Of course, the campaign among the schools is for the first flies and lasts longer."

How to Make Fly Trap.
"Prof. Hodge of fly swatting fame is now connected with the University of Oregon. For fear you have not noticed a description or seen one of his famous home made barn window fly traps, I am going to tell you about them. Make a box of wide boards to fit any windows you choose. Tack a screen wire on both inside and outside. The boards are wide and as large around as the window opening. Instead of tacking the screen winched folds, punch holes two inches apart and large enough for a fly to crawl through. In trying to get in or out of the window the fly will walk up until stopped by the downward fold, crawl through the small hole and is safely inside. These are more effective, of course, if other windows are darkened, and can be baited and used anywhere on the premises."

Fly Catechism.
The World's Work presents the following fly catechism:
1. Where is the fly born In manure and filth.
2. Where does the fly live? In every kind of filth.
3. Is there anything too filthy for the fly? No.
4. Where does he go when he leaves the vault and manure pile and the saloon? In the kitchen and dining room.
5. What does he do there? He walks on the bread, fruit and vegetables; he wipes his feet on the butter and bathes in the buttermilk.
6. Does the fly visit the patient sick with consumption, typhoid fever and cholera infantum? He does—and may call on you next.
7. Is the fly dangerous? He is man's worst pest and is more dangerous than wild beasts or rattlesnakes.
8. What disease does the fly carry? He carries typhoid fever, tuberculosis and summer complaint.
9. How? On his wings and hairy feet.
10. What is his correct name? Typhoid fly.
11. How shall we kill the fly? Destroy all the filth about the house and yard, or pour lime into the vault and on the manure; kill the fly with wire screen paddle or stick paper or kerosene oil.
12. Kill the fly in any way, but KILL THE FLY.

REO THE FIFTH

Now $220 Less

Note that Reo the Fifth—Mr. Olds' great car—sells at a new price this year. We have saved you 16 per cent on the car, equipped.

Some parts—like tires and electric starter—cost us less this year. But most of this saving comes from the fact that all special machinery for building this model has been charged against previous output.

And note that this car—at $220 less—has

Electric starter and lights

Oversize tires—34x4
Dimming searchlights

The Car That Stays New

Nobody doubts that Reo the Fifth is the best-built car in its class. It embodies all Mr. Olds' extremes, based on 27 years of car building.

It takes six weeks to build each car, because of the utter exactness, the countless tests and inspections.

The steel is twice analyzed. The gears are tested for 75,000 pounds per tooth, the springs for 100,000 vibrations.

The car has 15 roller bearings, 190 drop forgings. It has a costly clutch which prohibits all gear clashing. It has the simplest gear-shift in the world.

All driving parts are built one-half stronger than necessary—built to meet the requirements of a 50-horsepower engine.

10,000-MILE TESTS.

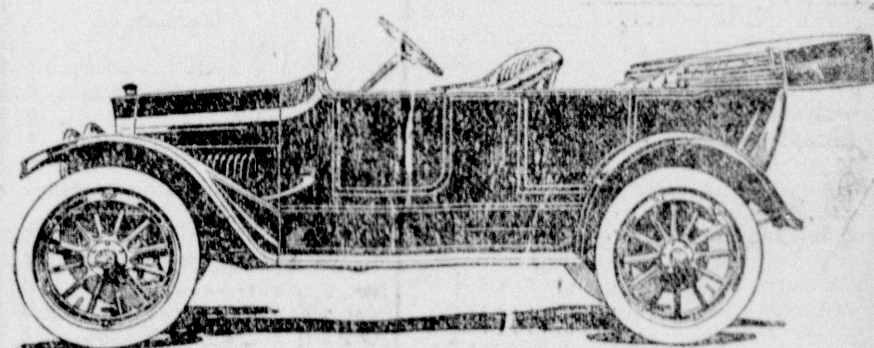

Test cars with this chassis have for years been kept running at high speed night and day on rough roads. After 10,000 miles of reckless driving the test car is taken apart, and every driving part is required to show up in almost perfect condition.

No other modest-price car has ever been built in this slow, careful, costly way. But the result is a car that stays new. It saves the average user hundreds of dollars in troubles, repairs and upkeep.

Men who know are buying cars like this. The spring demand is always twice the factory output. March sales have broken every record.

We urge men who may want this honest car to come and see it now.

THE HIGH COST FALLACY

Some people have a mistaken impression regarding plumbing. They believe there are two kinds—the cheap job of seconds with skimpy workmanship and the unnecessarily expensive quality installation.

Such reasoning is entirely without the bounds of fact. When building rest assured that your plumbing equipment can be what it should be—satisfactory in design, durability and price.

This we wish to demonstrate by going over your plans with you and showing the wide range of suitable "Standard" guaranteed plumbing fixtures which with our charge for installation will satisfy you as to quality and reasonableness of price.

A WOMAN DOCTOR.
says, "Eugenics is a necessary factor in the future of the race. The average American girl is unfit for motherhood." This may be true, but if weak and ailing girls passing from girlhood to womanhood, would only rely, as thousands do, upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—that simple remedy made from roots and herbs,—to restore the system to a normal healthy condition, it would cause many ills from which they suffer to disappear, so that motherhood might become the joy of their lives.—adv.

ALFALFA GROWING NOW ESTABLISHED FARM WORK

Successful Showing Made By Many Farmers—Record In Douglas County Is Recorded.

Mr. G. S. Tarbox of Douglas county, Illinois, has had extensive experience in growing alfalfa both in Kansas and Illinois. He contributes the following:

"The growing of alfalfa is no longer a mystery. During the unusually dry period of 1913 we harvested on our farm in Douglas county, Illinois, three full crops of about three and one-half tons per acre and permitted a good fourth crop to remain on the land for winter protection. Besides, we thought $65.50 per acre was sufficient returns for an off-farming year like 1913.

"I would advise the farmers to give more attention to alfalfa and live stock growing, thereby building up the lands, since alfalfa will improve the fertility of the soil for other crops; besides it has the power of gathering large quantities of nitrogen from the air, and supplying this in protein feed for live stock. Again, it brings up mineral foods from the depths that common grass never reaches.

"It is my candid opinion that any good corn soil will grow alfalfa successfully, and that much depends upon the seed, the proper preparation of the seed bed, and the care for the first year. I also favor spring sowing with one bushel of oats for a nurse crop. It is best to mow the oats for cattle feed before they mature. With this plan, it is possible, with sufficient rainfall to harvest a fair crop of alfalfa hay in August, allowing the growth of September and October to remain for winter protection. I would not advise pasturing the first year.

"I am also of the opinion that 20 pounds of seed per acre is too much, and I shall, in future, use 15 to 18 pounds per acre. I am using seed from lands that have stood the droughts, hot winds, and severe winters for 18 years and it is a fine hay and seed producer, and I am convinced that there is something in the strains of seed that show a 'hardy' tendency.

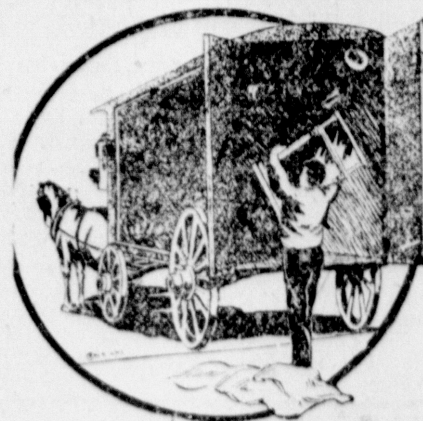

"Alfalfa is an ideal forage plant; it furnishes the protein to balance the corn ration; when we have alfalfa hay we do not have to buy oil cake; besides it is a feed that appeals to the sight, the appetite and supplies the protein needs of every animal on the farm, as well as the entire poultry tribe. In short, alfalfa is the coming forage plant and it will grow well for the man who wants it; it will grow indifferently for the man who does not care; and it will not grow at all for the man who does not sow it. The first man will profit immensely, the second slightly, and the third is a sure loser. To which class do you belong?

Did you ever sit in a railway train and looking through the car window at a train on another track and feel that your train was moving when in reality, it was the train on the other track that was in motion. Well, the man who does not believe in alfalfa for Illinois; the man who does not believe in a balanced ration, in farmers' institutes, in the study of improved methods, and in the adoption of systems of permanent agriculture, is afflicted with the same sensation as is experienced in looking at the train on the next track. He thinks he is moving forward, whereas he may not be moving at all—the other fellows are making all the progress.

Who is moving in your locality?—H. A. McKeene, Secretary, Illinois Farmers' Institute.

Mrs. Nannie Goldsmith of Waverly is spending Sunday in Jacksonville at the home of Sheriff Rogers. Mrs. Goldsmith came to Jacksonville on account of the serious illness of Mrs. Mary Rogers.

FARMERS NOTICE

We Are Now Manufacturing Fertilizers For Soil

We have made a careful study of soil conditions and are now putting up an article which is considered the best on the market for INCREASED YIELD OF Corn or Oats. The same has the following analysis:

Bone phosphate 63.99 per cent.
Phosphoric acid 28.90 per cent.
Nitrogen 2.53 per cent.
Ammonia 3.07 per cent.

If you will carefully compare the analysis of our ROYAL BRAND BONE MEAL, you will find that the same is cheaper than the use of Rock Phosphate or any other fertilizers which are now on the market.

It only requires from 100 to 150 pounds of our BONE MEAL to an acre of soil, depending upon the condition of the soil. This will increase your yield of corn or oats from 10 to 20 bushels to the acre for the first year.

SPLENDID IMPROVEMENTS AT THE VICKERY AND MERRIGAN STORE

Interior Beautified by Decorative Scheme in Which Colors Harmonize With Real Artistic Effect—A Credit to Jacksonville.

The extensive improvements in the Vickery & Merrigan store which have been in progress for a number of weeks are now completed and the already attractive store now presents surroundings at once beautiful and artistic. The ceiling and woodwork has been finished in egg shell white and the floor covering is a heavy linoleum of the new marble square design.

While the front portion of the room has been beautified in large degree it is in the furnishings and decorations of the ice cream parlors that the crowning success of the art work is seen. On each side wall are paneled scenes which give the exact effect of rich oil paintings. The mountainous beauty of Switzerland, the ancient castles of Spain, the water mirrored beauty of Venice and Great Lake scenery are among the subjects which are portrayed with artistic success. Between panels are heavy plate glass mirrors, four on each side of the room and five at the back. Above are the art glass, square electric lamps and the whole effect is one which must be seen to be fully appreciated.

The circular tables are of Austrian bent mahogany, with opalescent glass tops, the very latest models. Coat trees of solid mahogany are also appropriately placed. J. J. Mallen and Son had the contract for the decorative work and the finished product is indicative of the fact that J. J. Mallen is an artist who can both design and execute. The Vickery & Merrigan store is a credit to Jacksonville and it's equal is found in but few Illinois cities.

FIGURES REFERRED TO TAXES LEVIED.

A statement made by Mr. Lippincott in his address at the second ward school seems to have been misunderstood in some degree. In the article by Mr. Lippincott in the Journal yesterday the statement that the figures were taken from the records of the county clerk appeared in the wrong place. The figures as to election officials etc. were computed whereas the facts as to tax levy were from the books mentioned. Mr. Lippincott wishes further to be understood as stating that his figures related wholly to levy and assessment. The words "and collected" were inadvertent. His point was that the board of education had gone to the limit and more in the matter of taxes. He did not have the matter of extension and collection in mind.

TO-MORROW OPENING DAY OF CLEAN-UP WEEK

Committees Have Everything in Readiness for Making the City More Sanitary—Neat Folder Issued by Chamber of Commerce.

The Clean-up week committee has practically finished all the details relative to clean-up week, which promises to be an event in which the whole city will participate. The committee makes the following statement:

"Again is the Clean-up committee putting this question to every person living in Jacksonville. 'What plans have you made to assist in cleaning up Jacksonville this week?' As provided by the mayor's proclamation tomorrow has been designated as the opening day of Jacksonville's Clean-up week. The workers are increasing in each ward and they are trying to raise $200.00 to defray the expenses of a co-operative movement to haul away the trash.

How It is to be Transported.

All persons must have their unburnable rubbish in boxes or receptacles and put in the street in front of their homes by Tuesday, April 21st. Wagons will go through each ward on this appointed day and haul off everything which is put out. Everything put out after this date, as well as all ashes are expected to be hauled off at the individual's expense. By calling on Commissioner Newman, he will designate places in streets and alleys which are badly in need of good cinder ashes, minus any tin cans or rubbish that would make them useful for good road work. A great amount of work has been done this year by the committee to not only urge the people to clean up their yards, alleys and vacant premises but to secure contributions that will help families who cannot afford to have their rubbish hauled off. People in the various wards are expected to report to the following persons, who as chairmen are responsible for the work being done in each ward:

Mrs. Louis Engel, chairman, First Ward; Miss S. M. Fairbank, Chairman, Second Ward; Mrs. Thomas Buckthorpe, chairman, Third Ward; Mrs. John Cherry, Jr., chairman, Fourth ward.

Contributors to Fund. The following have contributed toward the expense of Clean-up week, and there are a number who have not been reported:

SOCIAL EVENTS.

The South Side Circle met Friday afternoon with Mrs. E. L. Kinney at her home on South Prairie street. The paper of the afternoon, "A Character Sketch of Eugene Field" was given by Mrs. George Fuhr and this was followed by a very profitable discussion. Refreshments were served.

Friday evening Miss Ruth Brown pleasantly entertained at her home on South Mauvalterre street the members of the Excelsior class of the Centenary church Sunday school. Games and various pleasant pastimes occupied the evening hours and delicate refreshments added to the pleasure of the occasion.

A delightful surprise party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fanning Friday night on East North street for their daughter, Miss Hilda, whose birthday the members of the Inner Circle Bible class helped to celebrate in a most fitting manner. The evening slipped away all too rapidly for the merry-makers and very reluctantly the guests departed, leaving the best wishes for Miss Fanning.

Messrs. Paul Wells and Richard Reynolds gave a dance Saturday evening at the Peacock Inn, and the delightful evening was enjoyed by twenty-five couples. Miss Marie Scott was a chaperone. Randall's orchestra furnished the music.

Under the auspices of the Willing Workers of Alexander M. E. church a social was given at the church Saturday night. That it was a well attended and successful occasion is indicated by the fact that the receipts were $104.

The Domestic Science Round Table met Saturday afternoon with Mrs. A. J. Ward on South Diamond street. Mrs. Pierson had charge of the program and her subject was "April Fool and All it Means". The leader presented her subject in a most interesting way and fascinating manner, which proved a source of much delight to every one. Refreshments suitable to the occasion were served.

Miss Caroline Grote was the guest of the Civic League at a luncheon given at the Dunlap yesterday. Mrs. David Reid presided and after the luncheon had been served Miss Grote made a brief but comprehensive presentation of the general school law. Several others present spoke briefly.

MISS DOROTHY ANN CAMP

WEDS MR. BERTRAM C. BRUCE

Wedding Ceremony Took Place at Home of Bride's Parents, Rev. R. O. Post Officiating.—Will Reside in Springfield.

A beautiful home wedding was solemnized Saturday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Camp, 729 West North street, when their daughter, Miss Dorothy Ann Camp, became the bride of Mr. Bertram Carr Bruce of Springfield. The ceremony was witnessed by only immediate relatives and close friends of the bride.

The Camp home was neatly decorated for the occasion by the use of beautiful flowers and ferns. The bride wore a blue silk coat suit with hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. Following the marriage vows, which were pledged in an impressive manner, a suitable collation was served.

The bride has always made Jacksonville her home and is accounted one of the accomplished young women of the city. She received her education here, graduating from the high school with the class of 1913. While in school she took a very active part in all student enterprises, being in several plays where she showed marked talents. She also studied for two years at the Conservatory of Music. She is a member of the Congregational church.

The groom is the son of Mr. W. H. Bruce of West Graad Place, Springfield, and is associated with his father in the conduct of the Bruce Sewing Machine Company, being vice-president of the organization. He received his education in the public schools of Springfield. He was formerly in the piano business, with his father, and is a young man of business ability and integrity, his life being such as to commend him to his business and social associates. He is a member of the Methodist church.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce went to Springfield last night in his father's automobile and from there will go to Chicago and other northern points on their wedding tour. Upon returning to Springfield they will be at home to their friends at 408 Adelia street, Springfield.

They received a number of beautiful and useful wedding presents. Upon leaving the house last night they were given a liberal rice shower by a number of young people of the neighborhood.

Among those from out of the city to attend the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bruce and daughter Clara Bell, Mr. Harry Smith, of Springfield, and Miss Jane Willbanks of Fancy Prairie, Ill.

A happy co-incidence of the wedding was a telegram of congratulation which the young people received just after the ceremony had been concluded from W. H. Daniels of Spokane, Wash., an uncle of the bride.

MISS GROTE ADDRESSED AUDIENCE AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Advanced Arguments to Show Superiority of the General Law By Comparison with Charter Methods of School Management.

At the public library Saturday night Miss Caroline Grote, dean of women in the state normal school at Macomb addressed an interested audience on the question of "The General School Law and the Jacksonville Charter." Miss Grote was for some years superintendent of schools of Pike county and is a woman of such large experience in educational affairs that her opinion is of value. Miss Grote was introduced by Mrs. W. S. Badger.

The speaker first considered the Jacksonville charter and reviewed the various provisions made therein, some of which are carried out and others of which have come into disuse. Then the possible objections to the charter were considered. Miss Grote said, "The provisions in the charter taken in connection with law changes, since the granting of the charter have inevitably brought confusion. The system from the fact of ward lines is somewhat complicated and the ward lines are undesirable because of the tendency to build up separate ward systems. The plan followed here is not in harmony with the general educational system of the state." The speaker then quoted the recommendations made by the educational commission wherein the advantages of the general law are emphasized. The fact that in 1870 there were 78 special charters and that now there are but 35 was cited to show that the general law has grown in favor. Conditions in Augusta and Pittsfield were mentioned as the general law was mentioned because Miss Grote had lived in those cities at the time the changes were made. Then Miss Grote went on to compare school methods under the general law with those of the charter and answered objections which are made to the operation of the law. The success of other cities in operating under the general law was mentioned and the speaker presented an array of facts and argument in support of her opinions which gave evidence that she had studied the question thoroughly and fully understood the provisions of both charter and general law.

It is a matter of regret that a complete summary of Miss Grote's excellent address cannot be given at this time.

ANDRE & ANDRE

A Very Hearty

Reception

Although our Delicatessen department is but three days old it is not too early to mention with what a hearty response the announcement of the department went. We have found that there are many Jacksonville people who long wished that there was some place here where they could buy a salad, sliced roast beef, and tongue, pies or cakes, products just like those of a home kitchen.

We are using the very best materials in all of our cookery, are selling in quantities of any size and are asking only such prices as will give us a fair margin of profit. Again, we say, whether you wish to buy or not come in and see our kitchen and our display cases.
